

Turn your box room into a frocks room!

Nobody wants a floordrobe

Once upon a time a walk-in wardrobe would have been considered a luxury, now it isn't a want but a necessity. Online shopping, the media and more affordable fashion has transformed the majority of us into shopaholics and hoarders, leading to an increase in the demand for bespoke fitted wardrobes and shelving units.

So what's encouraged this fitted furniture frenzy?

A nation of busy professionals and fashionistas, most of us spend our mornings in a flurry, digging through drawers and wearing something that doesn't need ironing. OCD about sock drawers, we dream about how dedicated shelves, rails and drawers would change our lives for the better. To see all your clothes, have all your shoes displayed on purpose built racks, to be able to design your perfect space JUST FOR YOU and your clothes.

From the moment Carrie Bradshaw opened the doors of her dream closet, almost every woman fantasised of having their own. Even the modern man loves the idea of having all their suits displayed neatly with their ties and belts hung in place. Most of us own clothes we never wear, or that we've forgotten about. Need for wardrobe organisation has never been so important.

Start by making a list of what you own. Count everything from long dresses to coats, even tights. Think of what you need storage wise, suitcases, hatboxes etc. Use your space wisely, use shelving, concealed storage in seating, and dedicate storage for accessories. The benefit of designing your own closet is you tailor it for your needs. If you have lots of shoes, dedicate an area to shoe racks. If you prefer hanging your garments to folding create more hanging space. The possibilities are endless.

Open storage solutions are great if you want to display things like handbags, and find things quickly. If you want a neater look and are concerned about dust, add custom doors. With choices including glass, wood or high gloss you can achieve a perfect style to complement the rest of your home.

If you don't have a dedicated room, you could dedicate a wall in your bedroom. The beauty of fitted furniture is that it looks like part of the house. If you have a large enough bedroom use sliding doors to create the illusion of another room. Make the most of natural light, and be creative with artificial lighting. Feature lights create an instant wow factor, and a benefit of fitted furniture is of course integrated lighting. Using mirrors will make the room seem lighter and bigger and by placing them cleverly, you will have the advantage of being able to see yourself from different angles.

If you are sharing with your partner, consider the design. Perhaps you could split the space in two and use it as a design feature "a his and hers". An ottoman is a great addition to your closet if you have the room and rugs and chairs can also add style and texture.

Designed to fit, one of the best things about fitted furniture is it can make use of sloped ceilings and wasted cubbyholes, so when you see a designer be sure to have some measurements.
